Bid farewell to Antigua with a scenic and historic journey across the island, culminating at Antigua Intl. Airport. The tour begins at the port of St. John's, from where you will drive through the island's lush interior, passing small villages and rolling landscapes en route to the dramatic southern coastline.

Your first stop is Shirley Heights, a 150-meter-high promontory that once served as a British military lookout. From here, you will enjoy sweeping panoramic views of English Harbour, the Caribbean Sea, and the surrounding mountains. You can explore the ruins of the old fort and learn about its strategic importance in Antigua's colonial history. Next, the tour continues to Nelson's Dockyard, a UNESCO World Heritage Site and one of the finest examples of an 18th-century British naval base in the Caribbean. Built in 1725 and named after Admiral Lord Horatio Nelson, the dockyard played a vital role in securing British maritime dominance in the West Indies. Today, it has been beautifully restored and is open to the public. Visitors can explore original structures including the naval officer's quarters, workshops, and warehouses.

After a guided tour of the dockyard, enjoy a light lunch at the Copper and Lumber Hotel, a charming establishment built in Georgian architectural style and located right within the historic harbor.

Following lunch, a drive across the island will take you to Antigua Airport, where you will catch your flight home.
